MRS. C. J. SIPPEL, DIES FOLLOWING LONG ILLNESS

Mrs. C. E. Sippel nee Hirsch who has been in poor health for quite a number of years, died at her home in Mokena last Friday afternoon at approximately 1 o'clock. She had been able to be about her home until Friday, when she complained of feeling ill and retired. Shortly afterward her mother, Mrs. Frank E. Hirsch found she died suddenly.

Mrs. Myrtle Lillian Sippel nee Hirsch was born on Nov. 23, 1894 in Blue Island. She was the daughter of Frank Hirsch and his wife Phillipina Hirsch nee Zahn. She was baptized in the Evangelical Church in Blue Island by the Rev. Mr. Niedergaess. Shortly afterward the family moved to Mokena and the deceased was confirmed in St. John's Evangelical Church by Rev. G. Sievekling.

On July 30, 1913, she was united in marriage to C. E. Sippel of Mokena. Two children were born to this union, one daughter, Gertrude and one son, Richard. Both the husband and children survive. Other survivors are her parents Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Hirsch, Sr., one brother, Frank Jr., one sister Mrs. Harry Mall and many other close and distant relatives and a host of friends.

She was a member of St. John's church for many years also a member of the Women's Union.

Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon from the late home to St. John's Evangelical Church. The Rev. Theodore Haelele officiating. The large edifice was almost too small to hold the many hundreds of friends who came to pay their last respects.

The floral offerings were very profuse and most beautiful. A male quartet sang a number of selections. Interment was made in St. John's cemetery south of Mokena. The deceased attained the age of 43 years, 11 months and 5 days.

Nebraska Snake Gets Auto Ride

When Rev. and Mrs. H. Sandall recently motored to Mokena from Wisner, Neb., they discovered that a snake was traveling with them. The reptile had crawled into an opening in the lining of the car door and its tail became entangled with part of the mechanism.

When the car was finally parked in the Cooper & Hostert garage in Mokena, Rev. Mr. Sandall and Elmer Cooper cautiously took the car door apart and there they found a five foot bull snake which was caught and placed in a box and was placed on exhibition at the garage.

New Lenox Boy Makes Live Stock Show Entry

Will county's first entries for the 1938 International Live Stock Exposition, to be held at the Chicago Stock Yards November 26 to December 3, were made today by two farm boys, Charles Francis of New Lenox, and William H. Webb of Plainfield.

They will both exhibit baby beeves of their own raising in the exposition's junior classes that were prize winners earlier in the year at the Will County Fair. The exposition's junior show will be a feature of the opening day.

Their steers will be judged by William J. Cumber, of Theale, Berkshire, England, who will tie the ribbons in all of the individual steer classes and will seek the grand champion. He is a well known live stock judge in Great Britain and supervises the large scale production of beef on five Berkshire farms.

Although a final count on entries, which closed November 1 for the live stock classes, has not yet been made the management predicts they will total over 14,000 animals. Competition will be offered for 30 breeds of farm animals, and approximately $100,000 will be awarded in cash prizes.

The 20th annual International Grain and Hay Show will be held in connection with the exposition. Entries for the crops show will close on November 10.

"Jimmy" O'Neill Has Had 13 Years Police Service

Thirteen years of service in the Illinois Highway police, five of them as sergeant in charge of the Joliet district, have given Jimmy O'Neill experience that makes him especially suited to serve Will County as its chief law enforcing officer say Republican leaders.

Republican leaders say "If you want a recommendation go to anyone who knows Jimmy and that is easy because thousands know him and will say that he is a loyal, conscientious, courteous, hard working, square dealer who is happiest when he can do a favor for a friend."

Jimmy lost his job as Illinois Highway police when the Republicans went out of power, despite his excellent record on the force and the fact that he was injured three times and twice shot and wounded while in the performance of his duties. Jimmy O'Neill will be a sheriff in fact as well as in name say his friends.

Mokena Banker Favors Banking Amendment

A tremendous strengthening of the State Banking System in Illinois may be looked for if the Constitutional Amendment on the ballot November 8 is approved by the voters, according to Rose Moriarty president of Mokena State Bank, Mokena. Mrs. Moriarty expressed the belief the Amendment would win, in view of the fact that no organized opposition to the proposal has appeared in the seven months since the campaign in its behalf opened.

The tendency of voters to concentrate on candidates of their choice, and ignore questions of public policy, is the only hazard the proposal faces, Mrs. Moriarty believes.

"Since our present Constitution was adopted in 1870, sixteen proposed amendments have been submitted to the voters."

"Seven of these were approved and nine lost, but only two of the nine were rejected by the voters. The others lost because they failed to get a majority of all votes cast at the election, as required by the Constitution. They lost because many voters did not vote at all on the proposal."

"This time the Amendment appears in the left-hand column on the regular candidate ballot, and voters can hardly overlook it. The Constitutional Amendment Committee has conducted a vigorous campaign of organization, publicity and advertising, and every voter in the State should know about it by election day."

"New banks will be organized in many communities in our State, that now lack banking facilities, if the Amendment is adopted. It is hard to appreciate the value of a bank until one has seen a community struggling long without one. Many existing banks will increase their capital, which is virtually impossible today bank stock which carries an additional liability which is a mortgage on indefinite future and may descend to a man's widow and children as a serious drain on their resources."

"We stand ready to explain this Amendment to anyone who is in doubt as to any of its provisions, and their effect on our banking structure, if they will just call at the bank. There is no serious argument against the proposal, and we hope that the voters of Will county will give a heavy majority in its favor."

Be sure and vote Yes on Tuesday, November 8, 1938.

Trade Treaties Leave Farmers In Plight

Reciprocal trade treaties entered into by the Democratic administration, plus the breakdown in its farm program with the resultant loss of export business in agricultural products have left the farmers of the nation in a serious plight, is the consensus of opinion expressed in the farming sections of the country, say Will County Republican leaders.

Not only have the farmers lost their export markets which gave them an opportunity to dispose of their surplus crops, but thru reduction in acreage thru the machinations of the New Deal farm program there has been a staggering increase in farm imports, government figures show.

"That window display at Republican headquarters, Jefferson and Ottawa Streets, Joliet, gives an excellent picture of the problem we farmers are facing today," said Harvey Wood who writes for Agriculture Magazine. It is too bad that everyone in the county can't see it, for it tells the whole story.

"Just imagine the beating the farmer has taken and is taking because of the New Deal. Corn, now selling around 41 cents a bushel should command a price of 75 cents. In 1932 our corn imports totaled but 347,627 bushels as compared to 86,337,248 bushels last year. There was a displacement in acreage of 3,453,489 acres. The New Deal doesn't want the farmers of the United States to raise corn, it would rather have it imported."

"In 1932 only 87 bushels of rye were imported but last year this figure has increased to 206,860 bushels. The normal price for rye is $1.00 a bushel but today it is 37 cents. The displaced acreage is 500,000 acres."

"Soy beans are selling at 66 cents a bushel when they should be bringing 90 cents. There has been a displacement of 1,953,893 in acres planted to this crop because the imports have jumped from 36,588,700 pounds in 1932 to 109,418,304 in 1937."

Barenz, nee Gondermann. He was baptized on the 10th of February 1860 by Rev. Adam Mueller of Tinley Park. Hold Open House

Sunday, October 30, the parsonage of the Tinley Park Methodist Church was a scene of fellowship and activity. Rev. and Mrs. L. E. Weinreich held an open house and tea for the constituents of their new church.

The first announcement of this activity was made at the welcome held for the new pastor and his wife, in church. At that time a large group extended their welcome, and displayed some of the talent that this church boasts.

While the tea waws the idea of the Weinreichs the congregation delightfully turned the tables and in their pleasant, cordial way, brought a shower of pantry gifts for this couple, new to their midst.

They began to arrive at 2 p. m. and continued to come until late that evening. There is no doubt that both congregation and pastor feel much nearer, one to another, and are ready to go to the work that lies before them with vigor.

Boys Caught Seeking to Place Ties On Track

The Halloween pranks in Tinley Park came very nearly taking on a very serious attitude when two Tinley Park youths attempted to place railroad ties on the lines of the main line of the Rock Island railroad. A Rock Island detective had been assigned to Tinley Park to watch for Halloween pranks. Unobserved by the boys he took up his station at the depot and late in the evening saw the boys dragging ties and attempting to place them on the tracks. The youths were apprehended and before they could carry out their plans. It is understood that they were taken to Chicago for questioning and reprimanded and later returned home.

"Ah, Richard," she said. "And John Herrick, I'm glad to see you again."

We went to her side at once, and she gave us her hand to be kissed—and then, but not until then, Elizabeth left the car.

The Count was not there to greet her. (He was in fact attempting without success to present 'my nephew, Percy' to the Duchess of Whelp.)

The reception was over, and we were alone in the hall, when, as though from nowhere, a maid appeared at our side.

"Her ladyship begs that you will take tea in her suite."

"At once?" said Herrick, rising. "At once, sir. If you follow me, I will show you the way."

She waited for me to rise, and then, with a delicate deference, took the lead.

Her demeanor was point-device: her appearance, beyond reproach: she breathed efficiency. She was dark and by no means ill-favored, and I would have said discreet, but for a curious expression about her lips—Leonardo da Vinci could have caught it, for the woman was not smiling, and yet the smile was there.

I followed her thoughtfully, because I knew who she was. And that was Elsa—Elizabeth's personal maid.

She led us the way we had gone some 45 minutes before—that is, by the staircase-turret Elizabeth always used; and, as we went, I paid what attention I could to the doors which shut the turret from the rest of the house. Of these there were three—one which gave to a lobby upon the ground-floor, one which gave to the picture-gallery upon the first floor, and one which opened directly into Elizabeth's bedroom upon the second floor. These doors, which were small but massive, could be neither bolted nor barred, but below each old-fashioned latch was a good Yale lock. The bolts of these locks were not shot, but were at present held back by catches within the locks: but, once the catches were down, none could have passed the doors unless they had been admitted or possessed the appropriate key. (I have made it clear before now that the turret had also a door which gave to the terrace without, that this door had a Yale lock, but could also be barred.) All the locks were within the turret, except the last: and that was in Elizabeth's bedroom.

Her sitting-room door was open, and as we entered the bedroom, I heard Elizabeth's voice. "I have said that, because of my fall, I cannot remember what happened for several hours: that, after that, I was cared for by people I did not know and that, by their advice, I sought the Duchess of Whelp. I may say that these people knew you and that, though they had not been engaged to, care for my health, nobody could have been kinder—or more insistent that I should not return to Brief."

"If you think," said Virgil, as I walked into the room. . . Elizabeth turned and smiled. "Do sit down," she said. "The inquest is nearly done."

In some agitation, the Count of Brief got to his feet, and Percy surveyed us with murder in both his eyes.

"If you think," you were saying," said Elizabeth.

"Thank you," said Percy, calmly. "If you think you can get away with a tale like that—"

"D'you mind getting out of this room?"

There was a pregnant silence. Then I walked to the door to the landing and opened it wide.

The Count of Brief glanced at his watch.

"My God, I'm late," he said, and fairly ran out of the room.

"Adjourned," not "done," said Percy, and with that, he turned on his heel and followed the other out.

As I shut the door—"Such men are dangerous," said Herrick, and put on Elizabeth's hat.

For a quarter of an hour we talked. Then she and I left for the stables, and Herrick went to the tower. But long before then, my inventory was complete. The door to the landing had a Yale lock, but no bars.

There was no mark upon Caesar, and if his legs had been tender, he now was perfectly sound. The grooms had noticed nothing when he came in. Two other good-looking hunters were each let out of his box, and Elizabeth bade me choose one "for tomorrow at seven o'clock." And then she gave her orders, and we went down the garden and up to the belvedere.

There was that about her which turned this into a bower.

Sitting sideways, half on and half off the gray of the parapet, backed by the living green of the jealous boughs, a stave of the evening sunshine touching her lovely hair, she seemed to have found her true setting for the very first time.

I found myself the youth that was seeking his fortune, to whom the princess was gracious—because the great tradition must be observed.

"How d'you do, Richard Exon?" I took her hand and kissed it.

"The better for seeing you." "Does that mean that you have missed me?"

"Yes," said I. "At every hour of the day."

Elizabeth nodded contentedly. "I like to hear you say it," she said.

I wrenched my mind from her beauty to other things.

"Was that Elsa who fetched us?" I said.

"It was."

"Are you sure of her? I'm not mad about her, myself."

Elizabeth laughed. "My dear, you see a robber in the tears from her eyes and put an arm round my neck.

"D'you love me, Richard?"

"Yes," I said. "I cannot tell you how much."

"And will you always love me?"

"Always, my darling."

"And, after this, you will treat me as your equal? And not kneel down and look up, with your eyes on my face?"

"I—I will try, to, Elizabeth."

"And you will not do me honor? John Herrick may kiss my hand: but you and I—Won't you ask me if I love you, my darling?"

"I—I'm afraid to, my sweet," I faltered, and held her close. "But if Old Harry consents, I will ask you to be my wife."

The beautiful eyes grew wide. "Since when has the Duchess of Whelp—"

"Since Friday," said I. "You have no father or mother: by doing as you have done, you have set her up in their place. For your sake, she has left her retirement and shuddered brilliance with every movement she made.

Here let me say that the game which she played was so cunning that I was soon out of my depth: add to which that she spoke in German which I could not understand. But, since I later knew all, I will set down directly what happened, because my own reactions have nothing to do with the tale.

Old Harry had had Herrick's note. She, therefore, laid herself out to entice the Count on to the ground which Virgil had said was forbidden, three hours before. In a word, she set out to make him put a rope round his neck—a seemingly hopeless task . . . but not to the Duchess of Whelp, for she turned the rope into a garland, and, after a little, he put the pretty thing on.

She handed him memories and then demanded them back; she said he must see her diary; she made the desert of danger bloom with good will; arm in arm, they wandered over its borders . . . By the time that the entree was served, the Count was most deeply committed—and Virgil, whom I was watching, could hardly sit still.

And then, without any warning, Old Harry let fly.

"What became of George Eliot?"

The table was round, and I was facing the Count, so I saw him well.

A servant was presenting a dish, but, because of this startling query, his master had no mind to spare and the man stood beside him unnoticed—except by everyone else.

Even at a literary luncheon, the question, so suddenly put, might well have disconcerted a wiser man: as it was, its striking irrelevance hit the Count over the heart.

He stared upon the Duchess, who had coolly returned to her plate, as though she had asked him whether his soul was saved: then he lifted his eyes to Virgil's—to read an interpretation which brought the sweat on to his face.

He shot a glance round the table, and a hand went up to his mouth. . . . Old Harry looked up from her place.

"What became of George Eliot?" I said.

Somehow the man made answer. "George Eliot," madam? Now let me see . . . The Duchess stared. "George Eliot." I think the edition we had—

"Edition?" cried the Duchess. "Edition? What ever d'you mean?" There was a painful silence.

The servant presenting the dish stood up and looked round for guidance: but Bertram, who had come to his help, was staring upon his master with saucer eyes. The latter wiped the sweat from his brow.

"My memory," he said, "is uncertain. You have revived it, madam, to some extent, but—"

"You remembered our visit to Palfrey, where the pictures were going to be sold. And your father saw one of George Eliot. . . ."

Her victim leapt at the bait.

"Oh, now I have you, madam. The picture, you mean. For the moment—"

"Picture? Is one of us mad? I asked what became of George Eliot." She threw a glance round. "Is there nobody here to support me . . . when I say that that is something which Rudolf of Brief should know?" Her eyes came to rest upon Bertram. "Steward, I know your face. Were you here when I came?"

In some emotion, Bertram inclined his head.

"I was here, your Grace."

"I'm Glad to See You."

every bush. Elsa is a maid in a thousand—and true as steel."

"Is she going to sleep in your suite?"

She nodded. "By your request."

"I—I didn't specify Elsa," said I, uneasily.

Elizabeth knitted her brows. "Richard, be reasonable. You've seen her for less than two minutes: and I have known her well for nearly four years. And if anyone is to sleep there, it must be she. If I were to choose someone else, I might as well say to Elsa 'I don't trust you.'"

"Yes, I see that," I sighed. "All the same, you will lock your doors?"

"All five," said Elizabeth.

"Where are the keys?"

"There's only the one you know—the one you brought me on Friday, with the rest of my things. That's a master key and fits all five of the locks."

There was a little silence.

Then—

"I wish we were at Raven," I said—and spoke as I thought.

"I wish I'd been there, with you both," she replied. "And all the time I was here, being waited on hand and foot. And sometimes you went hungry, whilst I was being fed by a chef who gets five hundred a year." She stood up there, and took my lapels in her hands. "I owe you money, don't I?"

"I suppose you do," said I, "but it's not worth talking about."

"Well, I'm not going to pay it back. I'm proud to be in your debt. I'd like everyone to know it. What I really owe you can't be reduced to pounds: if it could, I could never pay it—and you know that as well as I. But this I can pay: but I won't. I asked you to lend me money, and now I won't pay you back. You've piled such mountains between us that let this lift up its head—a sordid little mole-hill of 40 p-paper pounds."

Before this outburst, I stood like a man transfixed, with the breath of her lips on my face, and her eyes, two pools of starlight, reflecting a tiny image I knew was mine.

So for one hungry moment . . . Then she clapped her hands to her face and burst into tears.

I would like to be shown the man that would not have gathered her weeping into his arms—and have done his poor best to comfort such beauty in such distress. And for me her hairs were numbered . . .

Be that as it may, I know she was in my arms, and the world was rocking about me, and stars that I could not see shot out of their spheres; to make another heaven.

I do not know what I said: I think I did no more than say over her name: but, after a little, she wiped and taken the field: she could do no more, if you were her only child: and you cannot take such service from such a personage, and then deny her the rights of a patroness."

"What d'you think my father would say, if he were alive?"

"I know what he'd say," said I, "if he were the Count of Brief." Elizabeth sighed.

"You do make things hard, don't you? If you were a race-horse, my darling, you'd have to run in a hood. Still, at least I've managed to get you on to the course. And it's bound to be a walk-over—if only you don't run out."

"I'll never do that," said I.

But I did not say that, as both of us very well knew, fence we never so wisely, I must be disqualified. Instead, I stooped and kissed her exquisite mouth, and then drew her up to her feet and into my arms . . .

As though inspired by the Count of Brief's evil genius, Old Harry saw fit that evening to wear such a mask as made the blood run cold. Her right hand and her mirror, between them, had taught her terrible things. She had so painted her face that she made me think of some chieftain, arranged for war, and had tired her head with ear-rings—two monstrous, pear-shaped diamonds that dangled as lusters do,

Edgar Allan Poe Born in Boarding House in Boston, Tradition Tells

Edgar Allan Poe never possessed a home in the true and accurate meaning of that word. Tradition tells that he was born in a boarding house in Boston, observes a Washington Star editorial writer. His boyhood was spent under alien roofs in Richmond and in England. Neither at the University of Virginia nor at West Point had he anything better than "quarters." Casual shelter was his lot during his wanderings between 1830 and 1836, after which latter date he was habitually a dependent guest of his aunt, the kindly Mrs. Maria Clemm, whose beautiful daughter he married at the apex of one of the most poignantly sorrowful romances in the history of literature—a story to rank with the tragedies of Abelard and Heloise and Dante and Beatrice.

Mrs. Clemm made the young couple as comfortable as she could for three years in Amity street in Baltimore. The exact address is a matter of controversy, but the approximate location has been ascertained.

But Poe himself probably would not care. His cottage at Fordham in New York keeps his name alive for tourists, and Baltimore already is famous as the custodian of his weary ashes. More important than any single spot associated with his name is the immortality of his works. Even an ordinary reader is quick to feel the undiminished power of them. The occasional student who examines them with care learns to love the man from whose tortured soul they sprang. He perished at forty, yet left in his books a monument unparalleled—perhaps the largest, the most skillfully composed, the most notably diverse and the most profoundly compelling fruit that ever a suffering spirit has produced since the art of letters began.

Putting "Col" in "Colonel"

The "col" in "colonel" has the sound of "ker" because the word in former times was spelled "coronel," having had that spelling in the French and Spanish languages at the time it was adopted into English. It was also formerly pronounced "kuronel" and "kornel," but about 1800 the present pronunciation became the standard. The "r" sound remained, although in the meantime it had become the custom to spell the word as it is now.

Lesson for November 6

HONORING OUR PARENTS

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:12; Luke 2:46-52; John 19:26, 27; Ephesians 6:1-4.
GOLDEN TEXT—Honor thy father and thy mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee.—Exodus 20:12.

The splendid obedience of parents to their children has been pointed out as one of the remarkable developments of modern life. No, we have not made a mistake in writing or in typesetting. We mean just what we say—the obedience of parents to their children. In all too many homes God's order has been reversed and instead of honoring and obeying their parents, children (both young and old) have taken the place of "boss," and mother and father must obey if they want peace and rest.

The need for our lesson of today is both great and acute. The future happiness of hundreds of thousands of children (Eph. 6:3) and the present welfare of thousands of neglected and boss-ridden parents will depend on the intelligence and faithfulness with which this lesson is taught in our churches, and the honesty of heart with which men and women study and receive its truth.

I. The Command of God (Exod. 20:12).

The first and most important consideration to come before us is—what is the mind and will of the Maker of us all regarding this matter of the relation between parents and children? His words are plain—we are to "honor" our fathers and our mothers.

The word "honor" carries with it a great many things, but perhaps the three outstanding elements are respect, obedience, and affection. We should look up to them with high regard, obey them as long as they have the authority over us, and show true affection for them.

II. The Example of Jesus (Luke 2:46-52).

The fact that Jesus was God manifest in the flesh only enhances the glory of His conduct. He who is divine presents an example of obedience and consideration both as boy and man which we do well to emulate.

1. As a boy (Luke 2:46-52). The boy Jesus, increasing "in wisdom and stature and in favor with God and man," (v. 52) had come to His twelfth year and with His parents had gone up to Jerusalem to celebrate the Passover. There moved in His heart the conviction that He must now be about His Father's business—an altogether proper and commendable purpose but one which resulted for the moment in separation from His parents. This was far more serious than a physical separation, for we read that they did not understand Him (v. 50). Tragic indeed are the consequences of our failure to understand our children. Notice, however, that Jesus did not withdraw Himself from their watch care, nor refuse to obey them even though they failed to understand Him. Equally tragic are the results of hasty and bitter separations brought about by the disobedience of children.

2. As a man (John 19:26, 27). The value of our lesson will be greatly reduced if we see only the responsibility of children while they are young. We are the children of our parents as long as we and they live. Being grown up and having a family of one's own does not relieve one of the precious responsibility of care for one's parents. Jesus was dying on the cross, His brethren apparently still regarded Him in unbelief, and His mother now needed a son to care for her. Even in His dying agony Jesus remembers to commit her to the care of His beloved disciple, John. One marvels at the carelessness and hardness of heart that will permit men and women who have time and money for everything else and yet will neglect their aged parents and even shunt them off into a public institution for care. Notice the promise that accompanies the command of God (Exod. 20:12; Eph. 6:3). If that is the reward of those who do right, what do you think will be the punishment of those who disobey God?

III. The Admonition of Paul (Eph. 6:1-4).

This matter of honoring and obeying parents "is right," says Paul. It is the Lord's way. Only if parents command their children to do wickedness would there be ground for disobedience to parents. Apart from such circumstances every parent has the right to expect the child's obedience. There is tremendously important truth on the other side of the picture. Parents are not to provoke their children to anger, to disrespect or disobedience. How much we need God's grace at that point. It is so easy to say and do things that needlessly irritate our children. It is so convenient to nag at a careless child. Often we expect more of them than their age will justify. We are apt to punish them in a spirit of anger or revenge and thus to destroy the value of discipline. May God help us, who are parents, that we may take to heart this part of our lesson. Our children are our most valuable possession.

Hanging Shelves You Can Make of Spools

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

WHEN a number of persons have the same idea at the same time there is a reason. Recently I helped a friend make hanging book shelves of spools she had been saving. Today there comes a letter from a reader who says, "I have found so many helpful things in your Book 1—SEWING for the Home Decorator, I wonder if you have any ideas on fixing up spools? I have in mind the spool book shelves and corner shelves they used long ago." It's probably the general revival of Victorian ideas in decoration that has started everyone thinking of spool shelves.

We seemed to remember that the shelves we had seen years ago in old parlors were put together with colored cords. We tried this but the shelves were not rigid as the cords stretched. So we used wire and the result has been a substantial set of shelves strong enough to hold reasonably heavy articles. We bought the wire at a hardware store. It should be just stiff enough to bend easily with a pair of pliers.

A little less than 12½ feet of wire was used for the shelves shown here. Two sizes of spools were used. Shelves, spools, wires and all were finally painted to match the brightest tone in the room color scheme—in our case it was peacock blue. There are picture directions like these on every page of Book No. 1—SEWING, for the Home Decorator. If your house is your hobby, it will be full of thrills for you. Don't go through the holidays with shabby curtains or slipcovers. This book illustrates every step in making new ones. Book 2: Novelties and Embroidery, shows how to make dozens of Christmas gifts from odds and ends of material. Books are 25 cents each. If you order both books an interesting quilt leaflet included free. Address: Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplains St., Chicago, Ill.

Wait, Mother—Ask Your Doctor First

Never give your children unknown "Bargain" remedies to take unless you ask your doctor.

A mother may save a few pennies giving her children unknown preparations. But a child's life is precious beyond pennies. So—Ask your doctor before you give any remedy you don't know all about.

And when giving the common children's remedy, milk of magnesia, always ask for "Phillips' Milk of Magnesia."

Because for three generations Phillips' has been favored by many physicians as a standard, reliable and proved preparation—marvelously gentle for youngsters.

Many children like Phillips' in the newer form—tiny peppermint-flavored tablets that chew like candy. Each tablet contains the equivalent of one teaspoonful of the liquid Phillips' 25¢ for a big box.

A bottle of Phillips' liquid Milk of Magnesia costs but 25¢. So—anyone can afford the genuine. Careful mothers ask for it by its full name "Phillips' Milk of Magnesia."

Patriotism does not consist in waving banners, or wearing uniforms, or belonging to societies, or denouncing other lands, or waxing eloquent about God's own country. It consists rather in exemplifying in the twentieth century, the ancient truth that "righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people." —Dr. Mary E. Wooley.

SCOUT NEWS

The first fall hike of the year was held last Saturday. Scout Master Daniels, his leaders and twelve boys, spent the day in Starved Rock State Park.

The hike was termed a real success. The boys spent the day following trails and climbing rocks. Each boy cooked his dinner, then all devoted about 30 minutes to signaling. We visited several canyons as well as the salt and sulphur wells.

On the way out of the park, we stopped at a small coal mine and we were taken back in the shaft about 100 feet by the man who operates the mine. He told us that the mine was about 800 feet deep.

After leaving the mine, we started for home. Every boy had a fine time and is looking forward to another trip soon.

The first Court of Honor of Troop 53 will be held within the next two weeks. This is to be held in conjunction with our parent's night. Each patrol will put on a stunt to show what the boys have learned.

After a short program by the boys the Court of Honor will be held when the boys will receive their badges and degrees which they have earned during the past two months. A definite date will be announced in this column next week.

The smiling features of Melvin Keup will now be seen at the Tinley Park bank where he has now obtained a position. He still retains his interest in the Phillips 66 service station.

Mrs. Frank Baldwin is ill in her home.

Harry Trevvarthen's mother is critically ill at her son's home.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Beagley of Princeton, Ill., visited with the latter's mother Mrs. Fred Goebel over the week end.

Miss Ruth Funk is visiting at the Wm. Beagley home at Princeton, Ill. The Bruggeman elevator has been a very busy place these days, owing to the good weather and the good crops the farmers have had.

Jon Swisher has a new Ford V-8 1939 truck.

Jacob Funk aged 82 years who is one of the oldest residents of Tinley Park, who has been in poor health for some time, is critically ill in his home.

John C. Andres has gone on a trip visiting relatives and friends at Pierce, Neb.

Richard J. Tonn, who formerly owned the farm now known as the Davis farm southeast of Tinley Park and who is now engaged in real estate business in Los Angeles, Cal., has been visiting in Tinley Park the past week and called on a number of friends including several of the businessmen in town. He also visited his old farm.

Mrs. Pearl Gotham figured in an automobile accident during the foggy weather the forepart of the week. She was slightly injured but her car was very badly damaged.

Halloween night there were quite a number of parties. Among them being Halloween affairs held at the Mason, Becker, Florence Rice, Elmer Stelter, and Edmond Moss homes. At the latter two places parties were held Saturday and Sunday nights.

The Business Men's Association held a meeting on Tuesday evening relative to their special Do-not day celebration this week.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Otto Jeurgens, a son.

Mrs. Leonard Nylander of Peoria has been visiting with the former's father the past week. Mr. Nylander, who is in the employ of the Rock Island, and has been stationed at Peoria, has been transferred to Little Rock, Ark., and the family will move to the latter city in the near future.

The Halloween Jamboree sponsored by the Tinley Park Legion post at the Saenger hall on Saturday night was very well attended. It was much enjoyed.

Why Voters Face A Dual Responsibility

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

On the voters of America is imposed, as this is written, a double responsibility. At the polling place they will have opportunity, first, to select the candidates best qualified by character and experience for public office; and, second, to play a significant part in preserving the American ideal of democratic government.

For today, as every newspaper reader knows, the principle of government by the people is under a heavy fire of criticism from abroad. Flushed with new power, dictators and their adherents are launching bitter verbal attacks upon its methods and results.

America, the home, and for years the model, of Constitutional government must demonstrate to all the world the worth and value of that ideal. It must prove in the present, as it has proved in the past, that free government brings to all the people the greatest share of well-being, happiness and individual progress.

How can this responsibility be met?

Undoubtedly the most effective way is to elect to public office men, who, regardless of party affiliation, believe thoroughly in the tried and proved American form of government; men who are determined that government shall remain in the hands of the people, and who can be relied upon not to surrender to others, for political purposes, their authority as the people's representatives.

It can be met by voting only for candidates who believe that public office is still a public trust and would scorn to win or hold it by political trickery and false promises.

Since the birth of our Republic, the principle of representative government has been the keynote of the American ideal. When that principle is weakened or surrendered, the American system is injured, and the entire concept of free government suffers a serious blow.

In no way can the voter express more eloquently his patriotism than by choosing for office men who, by word and by deed, are committed to our American principle of Constitutional Democracy.

Bank deposits are not insured by the Federal Government, but by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, organized under Federal laws. Banks pay a premium based on their capital and the amount of their deposits. They buy the insurance the same as a person buys fire or life or any other kind of insurance.

More than 98 per cent of all bank depositors in Illinois have their money insured 100 per cent by the banks through the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. Few persons have deposits in excess of $5,000, which is the insurable limit.

The banking amendment to the State Constitution, to be voted on at the November 8 election, is the seventeenth to be submitted since the Constitution was adopted sixty-eight years ago, in 1870. Seven of the previous sixteen have been adopted, and nine have failed of adoption. Only two were beaten by adverse votes. The other seven failed because of the failure of voters to vote, as a constitutional amendment must have a majority of all votes cast at the election.

There is no longer double liability of stockholders in state banks in thirty-nine states. None of the states bordering Illinois has double liability except Indiana, and it also has moved to eliminate it by a constitutional amendment. Congress took double liability off the stockholders in National banks more than sixteen months ago.

No change in the method of amending the State Constitution is proposed by the banking amendment submitted by the General Assembly for action by the voters on November 8. Nor has the amendment anything to do with taxes. The proposed amendment merely permits the State of Illinois to modernize its banking laws and to strengthen its State banking system.

Double liability has never furnished much protection for depositors. In the banking disaster of several years ago, less than 2 per cent of the fund finally available for receivership expense and depositors came from the liability paid in by stockholders. The same economic conditions that wrecked the banks also made it impossible for stockholders to pay.

Branch banking in Illinois would be possible in Illinois under present Constitution, but the General Assembly would first have to amend the Banking Act to permit it. It is the policy of the Federal Government not to permit branch banking by National banks where it is forbidden by State laws.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Everlasting Punishment" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, October 30.

The Golden Text was, "Rejoice not against me, O mine enemy: when I fall, I shall arise; when I sit in darkness, the Lord shall be a light unto me" (Micah 7:8).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Let no man say when he is tempted, I am tempted of God: for God cannot be tempted with evil, neither tempteth he any man: But every man is tempted, when he is drawn away of his own lust, and enticed. Then when lust hath conceived, it bringeth forth sin: and sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death" (James 1:13-15).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Man is not God, and God is not man. Again, God, or good, never made man capable of sin. It is the opposite of good—that is, evil—which seems to make men capable of wrong doing" (P. 480).

A First Food Family

Cheese has a right to its claim as one of America's First Food Families. A generous supply of cheese came over on the Mayflower, along with a live cow to provide fresh milk for the children. The ancient bill of sale for the provisioning of the Mayflower is still held by an American cheese company.

The Fords Tell Their Plans for 1939

IF WE KNEW anything better we could do for the country than make good motor cars, we would do it.

By every one doing his best in the job he thinks most useful, this country is going to regain its momentum. We have tried to do our best in our job.

When business was suddenly halted in its recovery more than a year ago, we determined that we should keep going anyway, if not at full-volume motor car production, then at getting ready for greater motor car values that would help future production.

EXPANDING FOR THE FUTURE

We began to build 34 million dollars' worth of new plants and equipment. We felt that if we could not employ all our men building motor cars, we would employ as many as we could building better production facilities.

We were told, of course, that this was no time for expansion, that a wiser business policy would be to "hold everything"—which means, stop everything. But no one ever got anywhere standing still.

Besides, we are not defeatists. We do not believe this country has seen its best days. We believe this country is yet in the infancy of its growth. We believe that every atom of faith invested in our Country and our People will be amply justified by the future. We believe America is just beginning. Never yet have our People seen real Prosperity. Never yet have we seen adequate Production. But we shall see it! That is the assurance in which we have built.

Business is not just coming back. It will have to be brought back. That is now becoming well understood in this country; for that reason 1939 will be a co-operative year. Manufacturers, sellers and buyers will co-operate to bring back the business that is waiting to be brought back.

This construction program is almost completed. It has increased activity and payrolls in a number of related industries. It has given us better facilities for building better cars and trucks, and eventually our new tractor which is being perfected.

THIS MEANS MORE VALUE

The current program has provided a new tire plant, which will turn out a part of our tire requirements . . . a new tool and die plant that will help us cut the cost of dies . . . and a steel-press plant that will enable us to make more of our own automobile bodies. These are in addition to the plants we already had for producing glass, iron, steel, plastics, and many other things.

We don't supply all our own needs, of course, and never expect to. The Ford engine is one thing that no one's hand touches but ours. Of nearly everything else we use we build some quantity ourselves, to find, if possible, better and more economical ways of doing it. The experience and knowledge we gain are freely shared with our suppliers, and with other industries.

Henry and Edsel Ford, on the occasion of the 35th anniversary of the founding of the Ford Motor Company, June 16, 1938

We take no profit on anything we make for ourselves and sell to ourselves. Every operation, from the Ford ships which first bring iron ore to the Rouge, is figured at accurate cost. The only profit is on the finished result—the car or truck as it comes off the line. Some years, there is no profit for us. But we see to it that our customers always profit. A basic article of our business creed is that no sale is economically constructive unless it profits the buyer as much as or more than the seller.

Our new plants have helped us build more value into all our cars for 1939. That means more profit on the purchase to the purchaser.

We have not cut quality to reduce costs.

We simply will not build anything inferior.

NEW TESTING EQUIPMENT

While we were putting up new plants to produce cars, we constructed new equipment to test them. The first weather tunnel of its kind ever built for automobile research went into operation at our laboratories this year.

It makes any kind of weather to order. The weather it delivers every day would take months to find in Nature. Our cars are weather-tested to give you good service in any climate anywhere.

In other tests, every part of the car is punished unmercifully. Then our engineers tear it down to see if they can find abnormal wear or any sign of weakness.

The money we spend on tests saves you money on repairs. And your family car is safer and more dependable when we put it in your hands.

THE NEW CARS

We have two new Ford cars for 1939—better cars and better looking—but we also have an entirely new car.

It's called the Mercury 8. It fits into our line between the De Luxe Ford and the Lincoln-Zephyr. It is larger than the Ford, with 116-inch wheelbase, hydraulic brakes, and a new 95-horsepower V-type 8-cylinder engine.

We know that our 1939 cars are cars of good quality. We think they're fine values in their price classes.

With new cars, new plants, new equipment, the whole Ford organization is geared to go forward.

Margaret Brown, pretty economics co-ed, goes to the Chicago headquarters of the National Consumers Tax Commission to learn how indirect taxes on all commodities penalize the consumer. Donning gridiron gear, she charges into the pile of taxes hidden in the cost of a football—finds 103 of them inflate the retail price by almost ten per cent. Now she knows why thousands of NCTC women throughout the country are tackling all such levies which throw the public for a loss.

SPECIMEN BALLOT

For an Election to be held in Will County, Illinois, on Tuesday, November 8, 1938.

Henry Koerner
County Clerk.

QUESTION OF PUBLIC POLICY BALLOT

Shall the people of the State of Illinois approve the William Hale Thompson public policy proposal which provides that all members in the Congress of the United States from the State of Illinois shall vote "NO" on all legislation for the drafting of American boys to fight on foreign soil?	YES
	NO

STATEMENTS AND SUGGESTIONS AS TO PUBLIC MEASURES

Pursuant to Statute, the following statements and suggestions have been prepared relative to the substance of the various public measures which will be presented to the voters of Will County at the general election to be held November 8th, 1938.
HENRY KOERNER, County Clerk.

Statement and Suggestions of the Proposed Amendment to Sections 5, 6, 7 and 8 of Article XI of the Constitution of the State of Illinois.

This proposed amendment to the Constitution repeals all Constitutional and Statutory provisions making stockholders personally liable and provides that the banking law may be amended by a two-thirds vote of each house of the Legislature without submitting the amendment to a vote of the people. The proposed amendment of sections 5, 6, 7 and 8, Article XI, of the Constitution of the State of Illinois will appear on the ballot in the following form:

Explanation of Proposed Amendment.

1. Proposed section 5, like present section 5, provides that the State shall not be interested in any bank.
2. The amendment omits the provision from present section 5, requiring submission to the voters of acts of the General Assembly relating to banking. It provides in proposed section 6 that acts of the General Assembly relative to banking shall not go into effect unless such acts receive the affirmative votes of not less than two-thirds of the elected members of each House of the General Assembly.
3. Proposed section 8 repeals the provision of present section 6 making stockholders of a State bank liable to the creditors of the bank over the amount of stock held by such stockholders for liabilities of the bank.

4. Proposed section 7 provides that no bank shall hereafter be permitted to issue money or bills to circulate as money and replaces present sections 7 and 8 regulating the issuance of money by banks.

For the proposed amendment to Sections 5, 6, 7 and 8 of Article XI of the Constitution.	YES
	NO

In order for the proposed amendment to be adopted it must receive a majority of all the votes cast at the general election, not just a majority of all the votes on the proposed amendment. All who neglect to vote on the proposed amendment are really voting against it. Each voter of Illinois is urged to study this question carefully and to vote according to his or her best judgment.

RECORD OF EARNINGS AND EXPENSES OF COUNTY CLERK

Starting out four years ago with practically no funds with which to operate the office, Henry Koerner, candidate for a second term as county clerk, conducted its affairs so efficiently and so economically, that he now reports a surplus of more than $3,200, turned in to the County Treasurer, according to the reports on file with the Board of Supervisors.

Had Mr. Koerner chosen to bill the County Board for all the fees for County work that he has done, his surplus earnings would have totaled more than $135,000, a nice showing to the taxpayers but at their expense. It would have been like a wife giving her husband an expensive Christmas gift and then have the storekeeper send him the bill. Rather than add to the taxpayers' bill, Mr. Koerner did the work without fee.

"The head of a private business endeavors to save and make money for his stockholders," Mr. Koerner says. "The head of a public office has the same obligation to his stockholders—the taxpayers". He has met this obligation to the best of his ability and you may be assured that he will continue to meet it if it is his good fortune to be re-elected.

Mr. Koerner is busy now preparing for the general election November 8, as it is his duty to have the ballots printed, instruct the judges and clerks in their duties, distribute the supplies and canvass the returns. This is just one of the many duties of the county clerk. He acts as clerk of the election court, the board of supervisors, extend taxes, prepares the books for the assessors, handles cases involving the adoption and welfare of children, care of the blind and the keeping of many and important records.

Mr. Koerner, a native of Wilton township, once served as Highway Commissioner of Manhattan and was president of the school board in that community. His friends urge his re-election as County Clerk on the basis of his excellent record in that office. ADV.

Unfairness of Double Liability Being Cited

Representative A. A. Brands of Prairie du Rocher supplies an instance of the unfairness of the double liability on State bank stockholders that has had a counterpart in other communities in Illinois. He writes to the Constitutional Amendment Committee, campaigning for the banking amendment on the ballot November 8, as follows:

"A widow died in Prairie du Rocher a few years ago leaving as her sole estate 5 shares of State bank stock. Her son has been trying to sell this stock to pay burial expenses, and has offered the stock for very much less than it is worth, but due to the experience of many State bank stockholders during 1933 he can find no buyer. The result is that this estate has something of value that could be used to take care of the last debts of the deceased, but it can not be converted into cash."

Adoption of the amendment at the November election will again create the lost market for bank stock, and will enable the formation of many new banks in communities that sorely need them, as well as enabling other sound banks to expand their activities and give greater protection to their depositors by increasing their capital.

Toman Plans Tax Saving For Public

Sheriff John Toman, Democratic candidate for County Treasurer today says he believes he can bring millions of dollars of unpaid taxes into the County Treasury and that he will be able to take quite a load off the shoulders of the tax payer, if elected on Nov. 8. In making this pledge, Toman points with pride to his record of achievements as alderman and sheriff in Cook County.

Toman is busy now with Chicago's leading tax experts and real estate men, planning a bill which he will present to the Legislature in Springfield and which he hopes will adjust the present penalties on property or wipe them out entirely.

He says in most cases the depression is responsible for the non payment of taxes and the excessive penalties, and if these can be adjusted, the property owner will pay his or her back taxes. The sheriff says he will personally appeal to Governor Horner and the Legislature to help the tax payer.

Toman says other states have adjusted unpaid real estate taxes to give property owners an opportunity to save their property and he cannot see why Illinois cannot do likewise. Reduced taxes and giving property owners, especially of vacant, a new start, says Toman will stimulate building and bring real estate values up again. In his own words, he said: "Not enough attention is given the property owners who is up to his shoulders in difficulty. Help him and the wheels of industry will move again."

As sheriff of Cook County, Toman has outstanding records for achievements and economy and he pledges to continue these practices if elected County Treasurer.

Clayton F. Smith Stands For Economy In Government

For over a quarter of a century, Clayton F. Smith has held public office and in all that time no breath of scandal has ever attached to his name.

Under his farsighted leadership the credit of the County of Cook was restored to the high place to which it was rightfully entitled. On December 1, 1934, the date on which the President of the County Board assumed office, there were outstanding in county bonds $45,189,710.00 of which $6,515,410.00 were in default. Since December 1, 1934, an additional $2,522,700.00 in bonds were sold, making a total indebtedness assumed by the present administration of $47,574,910.00. In June 1936, the entire funded debt was refunded and at the present time the outstanding indebtedness has been reduced to $37,922,410.00, and none of the present outstanding bonds is in default.

In December 1, 1934, there were outstanding approximately $12,000,000 in tax anticipation warrants, all of which bore an interest rate of five, five and one-half or six per cent, while at September 1, 1938, this liability is reduced to $4,648,500.00 with an average interest rate of less than two and one-half per cent.

Another outstanding contribution to the credit of the County of Cook—when bonds in the sum of $30,013,500.00 were called in September 1937, they were not actually callable until January, 1938. Because of the new Federal law, which prevented banks from paying interest on public funds on deposit, President Smith saw fit to call these bonds before they were due. This procedure caused much favorable comment in financial circles.

His work is known to every person interested in good government. By supporting men of his caliber you support men who will insure a continuation of public service which is unequalled in the history of the County.

RIGHT AND WRONG WAY TO MARK A BALLOT

If you do not mark your ballot correctly it will not be counted. In every election many ballots are "thrown out"—that is, not counted—because voters were either careless in marking them or did not know how they should be marked. Michael J. Flynn, county clerk has issued these diagrams showing the right way and the wrong way of marking. Judges of election are required to "throw out" any ballot marked as shown in the TOP ROW of diagrams. Ballots marked as shown in the LOWER ROW of diagrams are according to law and must be counted by the judges of election. It is very simple. Use the "X" mark only, and keep it within the party circle at top of ballot, or in the squares before the names of candidates. Election Tuesday, November 8. Polls open at 6 a.m. and close at 5 p.m.

TWO NEW FORDS FOR YEAR 1939

The two finest Ford cars in the 35 years of the company's history will be given their first public showing today in dealerships throughout the country. The cars are the 1939 Ford V-8 and the 1939 DeLuxe Ford V-8. They are individually styled. Both are of compelling beauty. Both have hydraulic brakes.

Introduction of the new Fords climaxes a year of activity which saw the company embark on its current plant expansion program, bring out its entirely new Mercury 8, and establish the Lincoln-Zephyr still more firmly as the acknowledged style leader in the automobile industry.

The De Luxe Ford V-8, with wholly new streamlines, has a distinctive appearance of its own. At the same time, both it & the Ford V-8 share family likeness with the Lincoln-Zephyr and the new Mercury 8.

The De Luxe has a deep hood with long lines unbroken by louvers, low radiator grille in bright metal, and wide-spread headlamps set into the fenders. The words Ford De Luxe, in script letters of chrome, are divided at the front of the hood. The hood handle is concealed in a vertical extension of the radiator ornament.

The 1939 De Luxe is powered by an 85 horsepower V-8 engine of even more rugged construction than the 5,000,000 already in use. The Ford V-8 is offered with the same engine as the De Luxe or with the economy 60 horse power V-8 engine.

All Ford cars are now equipped with hydraulic brakes. Pedal action is exceptionally easy, and the brakes shoes work in 12-inch cast iron drums with a total of 162 square inches of braking lining for quick stopping and long life.

A feature of the bodies of both cars is their silence, achieved as a result of exhaustive road and laboratory research into the cause and correction of car noises. By minor changes in design and by use of newly developed insulating materials, engine and road noises are effectively kept out of the car.

The bodies are of all-welded steel construction, and are fitted with safety glass throughout. They have clear-vision ventilation and ventilating windshield. All body types have large luggage compartments. In fact the coupes in both lines have two luggage compartments and large shelves for parcels as well.

The interiors of the DeLuxe car are luxuriously appointed. Cushions in all body types are of entirely new construction to allow freer spring action. They are notably deeper, and the paneled effect in the tailoring gives them added smartness.

The attractive interiors of the Ford V-8 bodies show careful consideration for the convenience and comfort of driver and passengers. The cushions are deep, and are wide enough for three people. There are well placed arm rests, pillar lights, ash trays and other conveniences.

The Ford V-8 for 1939 has a full grille and unobtrusive louvers at the rear of the hood sides. Headlamps are recessed into the fenders. Decorative touches include a radiator grille ornament which incorporates a compact hood latch and handle.

Both the new Fords have the modern gauges, gloves compartment, grille for radio speaker installation, cigar lighter, ash tray, choke, throttle and other controls well grouped on newly-designed instrument panels. Both have headlight beam control operated by the touch of a toe, and a beam indicator on the panel. The DeLuxe also has a new instrument that shows at a glance the strength of the battery. The parking brake lever which actuates the brake shoes in the rear wheels by means of steel cables, in under the instrument panel to the left. Drivers seats are adjustable in all body types. All are equipped with sun visors and dual windshield wipers with a single control. There are dual electrical horns on the Ford V-8, and twin electrical air horns on the DeLuxe.

Proved Ford engineering features are continued in the new models. These include the centerpoise ride which allows passengers to ride between instead of over the axles. The springs are of chrome-alloy steel, and are of the transverse cantilever type. All Fords have four double acting adjustable shock absorbers. They have rigid deeply-channelled frames reinforced with an X-member. Wheelbase for both Ford V-8 and DeLuxe Ford V-8 is 112 inches.

The DeLuxe Ford V-8 is available in seven attractive colors. There are five body types: Tudor and Fordor sedans, coupe, convertible sedan and convertible coupe. The Ford V-8 is available with three color options and in three body types, Tudor and Fordor sedans, and coupe.

Bugle Calls

By Zeb Potter

Indiana plans to have a prison without bars. This idea is in line with the hope that first offenders in crime can be returned to society and make law abiding citizens.

It is true that many prisoners brood behind the bars and become embittered against the social order. The crime bill of the nation is enormous. Sooner or later the state will wake up to the fact that it is cheaper in the long run to keep the repeat offenders behind the bars for "keeps". When they're loose; they are in trouble.

Whether you know it or not this nation is quietly preparing for war. The army is attempting to enroll 75,000 men for four year enlistments in the reserve. The pay is to be two dollars a month or inactive duty.

The Navy is not satisfied with the training given the reservists from the middle-west states and insists that their next training cruise be on salt water.

The government is intensely interested in airports and is improving them everywhere they can. The smaller fields are getting their share of attention, because Uncle Sam knows that the larger and more important centers will be bombed first by the enemy.

Back of all this war business is the hunger of the dictators in Europe and Asia for more land for their people. There is a lot of land in this world we admit. Good land is at a premium. Would you trade two hundred acres of fertile Will County land for two hundred out in the sage brush of Wyoming. No, you wouldn't. So it goes up and down the world.

With the Monroe Doctrine and Uncle Sam obligated to keep his eye on South America so that Japan, Germany, and Italy will keep their hands off, we have some responsibility ties ahead of us. Thus the war preparations of this government.

"Zeb, do you want war"? No. I saw what happened in the last war. War is futile game. Any war veteran that saw service overseas either in the army or navy will tell you that.

Hitler has started to kick 20,000 Jews out of Germany. Why does he make a football out of the Jews? Simply this, he has to have a target to aim his anger at to keep the minds of the German people off their true condition under his rule. Hitler is a master showman, he uses propaganda and ballyhoo better than Barnum. He can't afford to let the German people know that he is leading them along a dangerous path To camouflage his tricks he does Jew-baiting.

November 8, please get out and vote. Vote what ever way you choose but vote. This country today more than ever needs the interest of decent law abiding citizens in public affairs. Vote. That's all this week, Zeb Potter.

Flynn Collects Over 4,000,000; Distributes 99 Pct.

In less than three years County Clerk Michael J. Flynn has collected $4,616,935.25 in tax redemptions and to date has returned over 99 per cent of this amount to the respective cities, villages and towns in Cook county.

This great record of efficiency has received the commendation of many important civic leaders who have perused the audits of Mr. Flynn's books and found them in excellent condition. Affirming their stand is the response from various officials of the towns in the county making clear their wholehearted appreciation and endorsement of the new system as evidenced by the congratulatory letters which have been written to County Clerk Flynn.

Thrills Aplenty for Women At New York Fair, 1939

NEW YORK (Special).—The thrill capital for women next year will be the New York World's Fair. Designers, merchants, manufacturers, artists, governments—all "the authorities"—have seen to that. And yet, uniquely enough, there will be no "woman's building" at the $150,000,000 exposition. Fair officials at the outset decided against such "segregation." Grover A. Whalen, president of the Fair Corporation, said that "a woman's building at a modern-day exposition would not be in tune with the progress of woman-kind."

Now, in this last year of construction, it is already obvious that woman is going to have her due at the New York fair. Those fortunate enough to attend are going to know "thrills that will live with them always. The following presents only a pot-shot at all there will be to interest and delight women in the 1216½ acres of fair grounds. It is one observer's idea of what to see where.

Some of the Wonders

House of Jewels—a $5,000,000 display, by gem mining concerns and leading jewelers, showing stones in the rough, precious gems in finest settings, famous gems and perfect examples of goldsmith's and silversmith's art.

Apparel and Accessories—in their own building along Petticoat Lane—a $750,000 exhibit of all dear to woman in her costuming and in furs, hats, handbags and similar wearables or gadgets.

Cosmetics Building—showing just about everything ever done since the history of beauty aides and preparations began a few thousand years ago—with accent on the cosmetics and perfumes of today and a look at those of tomorrow. (They put thousands of dollars' worth in the cornerstone alone.)

Hall of Textiles—showing how they (worms to machines) make woven fabrics—hand looms, demonstrations of needle arts, discourses on home furnishing materials—silks and woolsens here, rayons in one wing, cottons in another, 68,095 square feet, to be exact, of allied exhibits.

Health and Science

Home Furnishings Building—"heart of the Community Interests Zone," with its focal display showing the meaning of "Home" in present and future phases and how to create one of your own—all in exhibits that thrill.

Medicine and Public Health and Science and Education Building—a "famous first" exhibit showing the wonders to be accomplished by due attention to the "body beautiful"—a must attraction that'll not leave one with a dull moment.

Gas Industries Building—everything from a laboratory to an all-gas house, a cooking school and a gas flame 50 feet high—spectacular but looking to comfort at home.

Food Buildings 1, 2 and 3—putting romance into the age-old task of fixing a meal, by and with the world's knowledge and products.

Horticultural Exhibit—acres of gardens, flowers and equipment (with a chance for a cup of tea).

Thrills in a Lifetime

Theme Centre—thrill of a lifetime from a ride on the "Magic Carpet" through the 200-foot globe and the World of Tomorrow.

Contemporary Arts Building—World's Fair Theatre (music and drama)—Consumer Building—an "Hospitality Centre," first of its kind, for feminine get-togethers—spectacles on the island stage of New York State's Amphitheatre on Fountain Lake—products and kitchens of the world in two score foreign-built pavilions—the Hall of Nations, the Court of State Buildings, the $3,000,000 Federal Exhibit—buildings of industries and the City of New York—nightly spectacles of water-fire-color-and-sound—280 acres of amusements—and, withal, a setting of courts and garden with an ample supply of shaded benches.

Refreshment to go on and on may be had in any one of some 80 restaurants, affording a total of 43,200 seats, and serving the meals of almost every known nation. And—perhaps most thoughtful provision of all—the youngsters can be parked in the Children's World where they'll be happy and well-cared for

BY LAND, BY SEA, BY AIR — ALL ROADS LEAD TO NEW YORK FAIR

MOKENA

At the meeting of the village board of Mokena, Tues. night the chief topic under consideration was the enforcement of collection of delinquent water bills. Quite a number of old accounts were turned over to police officer George Bennett and August Hentsch for collection with instructions that non-payment of these bills would mean that the water supply of the delinquents will be shut off at once. Heretofore the board has taken promises made by water users to pay but found most of these promises were not kept. As a result promises do not mean anything to the board who will insist from now on that delinquent bills must be paid by a certain time or the water supply will be shut off.

MANY TIMES WORSE THAN WAR

"And I'M Supposed To Be The Scourge Of Mankind!"

Disasters Strike 41 States During Year

Red Cross Aids 420,000 Persons Following Catastrophes

That the past year has not been an easy one for the American Red Cross is shown in a recent report listing disasters necessitating Red Cross relief throughout the United States during the past twelve months.

The report reveals that 129 domestic disasters called for Red Cross aid in 247 counties of 41 states, and that assistance was given to 420,000 persons who were disaster victims.

"That this has been a very active year is obvious when one compares this year's operations with the average of 92 disasters requiring Red Cross aid annually for the past 15 years," Chairman Norman H. Davis said in commenting on the Red Cross Disaster Relief Service report.

These catastrophes included cloud-bursts, cyclones, epidemics, fires, floods, forest fires, hailstorms, mine explosions, a school bus accident, a shipwreck, tornadoes, typhoons, and wind storms.

"Disaster relief was the first humanitarian work of the American Red Cross after its organization in 1881," Mr. Davis said. "In the ensuing 57 years the flag of the Red Cross has flown upon every scene of major disaster in the United States. The Red Cross has carried relief—food, clothing, shelter, medical aid, rehabilitation of homes and families—to more than 2,200 scenes of disaster at home and abroad, and has expended over $140,000,000 contributed by the American public in this work of mercy."

The Red Cross policies of relief, the national chairman pointed out, have been established over a period of years through actual experience of its workers in the field. Relief is given on the basis of need of sufferers—not of losses. Loans, he pointed out, are never made, but relief is a gift from the Red Cross in the name of its members and contributors to its work.

"It would not be possible for the Red Cross to carry out such widespread relief activities without the help of thousands of volunteer workers," Mr. Davis said. "Volunteers are the mainstay of the organization, and in the past year's work assistance from many cooperating agencies has made it possible for us to answer the many calls for help."

While relief was being given to victims of natural catastrophes, the Red Cross was not unmindful of the necessity for preparedness plans to meet emergencies that may arise in any American community. Red Cross chapters in hundreds of counties have organized disaster preparedness committees charged with responsibility to map relief plans in advance of need, and to organize resources of communities to prevent duplication of effort and waste of materials when calls for help are received.

These plans are proving especially advantageous in localities subject to frequent floods, tornadoes, or hurricanes, and actual tests of such planning have demonstrated the necessity for such measures.

"The administration of such relief for disaster victims is made possible by annual memberships of millions of Americans in all walks of life," Mr. Davis pointed out. "The extent of Red Cross aid to such sufferers is entirely dependent upon unselfish sharing on the part of all of us."

Aluminum, Once Royalty's Tableware, Completes 50 Years of Practicability

Industry's Golden Jubilee Recalls Early Struggle Of Co-Pioneers.

By JOSEPH W. LaBINE

Fifty years ago this November, in a little "two-by-four" building in Pittsburgh, Charles Martin Hall and Arthur Vining Davis tinkered with a dyspeptic electric generator, a few carbon electrodes and a carbon-lined "pot" for an "electrolytic bath."

One of them closed a switch, the electrodes sputtered, the current began to pass through the mass in the pot—and a new industry was born which was destined to affect virtually all of the nation's population. Their discovery: Aluminum.

For more than half a century scientists of the world had sought to produce it cheaply enough to remove it from the category of an emperor's tableware to a practical metal. Napoleon III had sunk a fortune trying to produce it for light-weight trappings that would give his cavalry an edge on its foes. In 1855, the king of Siam had selected a bar of aluminum as the most unusual object at the world's fair in Paris, had a watch fob made from it, and bore it proudly back to Bangkok.

Today, as it prepares to celebrate its golden anniversary, the aluminum industry furnishes jobs directly for 51,200 workers with an annual payroll of $68,000,000, the Aluminum association, a trade group of some of the 200 manufacturers of more than 2,000 aluminum products, estimates. Indirectly, it provides jobs for 150,000 more, the industry claims.

Metallic Reincarnation

Yet it is probably impossible to make an accurate estimate, says Capt. Kenneth G. Castleman, secretary of the association, for by far the major tonnage of virgin aluminum produced becomes a permanent part of the American scene, since the "scrap" is highly recoverable by remelting and returns often a dozen times to make competition for the new metal produced.

"The aluminum foil which wrapped your morning cigar may

Aluminum is used in countless forms—sheet, tubing, forgings, extruded shapes, impact extrusions, foil and wire, to name a few. This workman is pouring small sand castings.

have gotten its original start in life in a cast touring body of the now extinct Franklin automobile or one of the famed 'White Steamers,' Castleman says. "Sold as scrap from an automobile boneyard, it might have been restored to usefulness successively as a cooking utensil, an automobile piston, a washing machine or vacuum cleaner part, a bit of a permanent wave machine, a hair curler, a toy kite, a souvenir calendar-back or even a set of false teeth. When you throw the cigar wrapper away, more than likely someone will rescue it from the city dump and it will return again to service, possibly as a condenser in your television radio set."

In the short space of 50 years (aluminum, commercially, is 10 years younger than electric light) it has assumed fourth place in volume among metals, although it has had to battle for its position with other materials commonly employed for thousands of years.

The first twinkling dawn of a bright future probably appeared on a February morning in 1886, when Charles Martin Hall, then a youth just out of Oberlin college, rushed from his crude, woodshed laboratory to the home of his former chemistry professor, crying, "I've succeeded, at last I've succeeded!" In his hands were some pellets of the first aluminum to be made by the electrolytic process which still produces all the nation's aluminum.

Headaches, Heartaches

But Hall's experiments had been made in the laboratory. There was no assurance they would work on an industrial scale. He couldn't find a backer, and it was two years before Capt. A. E. Hunt, George S. Clapp and a few other Pittsburgh men decided to take a gamble and invest $20,000 in an experimental, or "pilot," plant.

Hall's process had so many "bugs" that for the first year or two the little plant was hardly more than an experimental laboratory itself. Arthur V. Davis, another young college boy who had been hired as night superintendent, now recalls the early days with a twinkle in his eye.

"Hall and I roomed at the same house, and each of us worked a hectic 12-hour shift," Davis, today the outstanding figure in the aluminum industry, reminisces. "Something was always going wrong with the plant. The machinery would break down, the current would fail.

"It's rather an amusing thing that for a while during the first year the only time we were able to produce any aluminum was when the plant broke down and the bath would harden, or 'freeze.' In hammering this black, dirty mess out of the pots, we'd usually come across a few pellets of comparatively pure aluminum. For the first year we kept the metal in the office safe, because it was worth $5 a pound at that time, although today the price is listed at 20 cents."

But after they had produced their lightweight metal, Hall and Davis slowly awakened to the surprising revelation that hardly anybody wanted it. True, there was some little sale for mustache combs, ladies' fans, cigar cases and a few similar novelties popular in the nineties. But to make their orphan industry successful, these pioneers knew they must get it into fields of common use.

Like cooking utensils, for instance. Aluminum is light, conducts heat evenly and does not contaminate food. Today nearly 400,000,000 aluminum cooking utensils have been made. But in the early days it was impossible to get a utensil manufacturer to give the metal a try.

He Has the Evidence

"As a matter of fact, I made the first aluminum cooking utensil myself," says Davis, and he still has the original article—a teapot—on display in his office to prove it. "We had to build our own sheet mill and eventually a cooking utensil plant to get them on the market at all. Then many of the stores refused to stock them, because they were already making a profit on more familiar goods made of other materials. So we peddled our wares house to house. That was where the 'working - my - way - through - college' sales approach was born. One of our collegiate salesman, incidentally, was Huey Long."

The same story was true of electrical conductor wire, which now consumes one-eighth of the nation's aluminum. Davis, after long travail, succeeded in persuading a customer to try aluminum cable—and then found there wasn't a solitary mill capable of producing it. He had the double trouble of keeping the customer happy while building a cable plant in a whale of a hurry at the same time.

To make aluminum generally available, the founders of the industry themselves had to find new uses for the metal and often turn out the fabricated products themselves. From their research laboratories have come the discoveries leading to streamlined trains; new oxide finishes which opened up wide fields in architecture and construction; aluminum foil to wrap foods and insulate buildings; weather-resisting aluminum paint, and countless alloys which make the metal adaptable to almost any purpose.

The American aluminum industry produced 292,000,000 pounds of virgin ingot last year. Yet it is within the memory of persons now living that a certain young man in Pittsburgh once brought from London a pair of opera glasses with frames of aluminum as a precious present for his bride; he could have had platinum, but aluminum was so much more unusual—and they were both the same price!

No hope of peace between government and public utilities is in sight... Towns hazy over what constitutes a "reasonable offer" for a utility... Federal treasury is buying all the silver Mexico chooses to offer... Little hope of lifting the burden of armament costs.

WASHINGTON.—If it were not that such a conclusion would be utterly untrue to form, knowing the slant of President Roosevelt and PWA Administrator Harold L. Ickes on the electric industry and public ownership, one might almost assume that peace was in sight between the government and the utilities.

The developments are surprising. Electric Bond & Share figures several ways. First it announces it will submit to the securities and exchange commission on the death sentence situation. This follows the sale of its subsidiaries in Knoxville and, just prior to its "surrender" announcement, in Memphis. Incidentally most experts agree that Electric Bond & Share got pretty fair prices for both these properties. This is surprising, because the general impression had been that Electric Bond & Share was second on the list of best hated electric holding companies as far as the White House is concerned.

Whereas Commonwealth & Southern had been regarded as being pretty near the top of the most favored list, yet it is having a tough time getting the city of Chattanooga and other communities that want to roll their own to make fair offers.

All over the country cities and towns that had counted on PWA allotments for electric distribution, or generating plants, have been amazed at the dictum that they must make reasonable offers for the privately owned plants in their communities before federal money will be forthcoming. This is carrying out the so-called Barkley promise.

Towns and Cities Bit Hazy About What Is "Reasonable"

In the closing days of the last session of congress opponents of what they regarded as unfair government competition with private business were pressing for an amendment to the relief bill which would have prevented loans or grants to any cities where privately owned systems were already serving the public. To head off passage of this amendment, which looked very strong, Sen. Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, Democratic leader of the senate, promised that, if the amendment were not adopted, PWA would make no loans or grants unless reasonable offers to buy out existing facilities had been refused by the private owners.

Now the cities and towns desiring loans do not know what to do. They have very hazy ideas as to what a "reasonable" offer for the plant they want to buy is. In very few instances have they anything to go on except the figures of the existing company. As a result, they have appealed to Secretary of the Interior Ickes to loan them experts to make the calculations on which they will make their "reasonable" offers.

Treasury Buying All Silver Mexico Chooses to Offer

Despite the popular impression to the contrary, the federal treasury is buying every ounce of silver that Mexico chooses to produce and sell. Furthermore, it is holding up the world price by so doing. Besides that it is paying a handsome subsidy into the Mexican treasury because Mexico imposes a tax of eight cents an ounce on silver produced, so that every time Uncle Sam pays 43 cents for an ounce of Mexican silver eight cents goes into the Mexican treasury direct. Of course, there are other Mexican taxes on the producers, so that actually the net benefit to the Mexican treasury is a good deal more than eight cents. In addition, Mexico collects a new export duty amounting to 12 per cent of the value of the silver!

A somewhat comparable situation would be if England decided to buy all of America's chief export crop, cotton, and to pay for it, not the world price, but a couple of cents more, say 10 cents a pound now and if the United States government imposed a tax of one cent a pound on all cotton produced, the federal treasury in Washington would then benefit not only by the direct tax on the cotton that would be sold, but in taxes on the handlers and what little could be raised from the producers themselves.

Actually, a fairer comparison would be copper, because that is produced by large corporations, largely, as silver is produced in Mexico, and hence the higher price paid by England would produce larger federal corporation and individual income taxes.

Now Treasury Is Buying Direct From Producers

No one hesitated much about this policy up until last March when Mexico seized the oil wells owned by British and American interests, valued at about $150,000,000 for the American property and $250,000,000 for the English. On March 31, this year, shortly after this seizure, the treasury here formally announced that it had abrogated the agreement with the Mexican government under which it was buying this Mexican silver. There was general public approval, not only because most folks did not see why this government should continue to subsidize Mexico after such a seizure of American property, but actually most folks could not see why this government had subsidized Mexico in the first place.

Actually, this government has been buying Mexican silver at an increased rate since this March 31 announcement. The only difference is that the transactions are no longer formally handled with the Mexican government. Instead the purchases are made from the producers, though of course after they have paid the eight cents an ounce tax to the Mexican government.

In March, the last month under the agreement, Mexican silver amounting to 5,089,997 ounces was bought by the United States treasury. In April, the first month following conclusion of the agreement, Mexico sold our treasury 5,061,803 ounces. In May, this rose to 5,439,234 ounces, and in June to 5,998,978 ounces.

Inquiries at the treasury here are answered by the statement that the treasury is acting "under orders" in buying this silver. Inquiry as to where the orders come from are answered by the statement that no reply will be given, but the hint is thrown out that after all there are only two places the orders could come from. One is the White House, the other is the state department.

Little Hope for Loosening Burden of Armament Costs

Optimism about the much talked about armament limitation conference, with a view to removing the terrific burden of armament costs from the various peoples of the world, has little foundation in anything that Washington diplomats can see or understand.

It was no surprise to them when President Roosevelt recently admitted at a press conference that the expenditures for the navy next year will be greater than this year. That has been known to everyone connected with or interested in the navy.

Its real importance lay in the fact that there had been some who thought the United States might make a gesture, in the hope that the other nations would follow it. President Roosevelt does not believe such a gesture would be effective. He believes furthermore that it would be positively dangerous for the United States to relax in arming itself. The more powerful in modern war weapons and readiness to fight the United States is, in the President's opinion, the less danger there is that some other nation will pick a quarrel with us.

There is no suspicion at the state department that any particular country wants, at this time, to pick a quarrel with the United States.

Foreign Powers Straining To Increase Armament

Actually, however, the big point that makes unlikely the success of any armament conference which might be held, is that the powers that seem to American eyes already armed to the teeth are straining every nerve to increase their military power. Although the four-power group at Munich dispelled the war, the armament race by Britain, France, Germany, Italy and Russia has increased instead of slowing down.

Since that Munich discussion France has publicly announced tremendous increases in her defenses against Germany.

Russia has said little about her preparations, but it is known here, by shrewd diplomats, that Russia grimly intends to have an air force which will be at least equal to that of Germany. The best indication of this, it is pointed out, was the bitter resentment in Moscow over the alleged statement of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh as to the superiority of the German air force. This is the more interesting because in the first place it seems to have been a cock and bull story.

Lady Astor, at whose party Lindbergh was alleged to have made the statement, has denied that he was even at the party. Lindbergh himself has not denied it, but that is not significant, because as every newspaper man who has contacted him knows, he bitterly resents any intrusion by the press into what he regards as his private life. This was true long before the tragic kidnapping and murder of his child.

But the Russians, though they must have known that there was no basis in fact for the alleged Lindbergh statement, rushed out a statement signed by many of their aviation experts characterizing the alleged Lindbergh statement as a lie.

No, it looks as though the armament race would continue for a long time.

For Large Figures.

Here's one of the most becoming and comfortable work dresses you ever had on, if you're in the 36 to 52 size range. Every detail is designed to give you freedom of movement, and to make you look thin. The armholes are ample. The darted waistline looks slim without being tight, and it blouses just a bit for greater ease. The scalloped front, braid-trimmed edges and white collar (with long lines, becoming to full faces) trim it up just enough. This is a diagram design, so you can turn off half a dozen of it in no time!

The Patterns.

Election Day—Picture Day

A favorite American political game is having your picture taken while voting. Here's a preview of three politicians as they will appear November 8. Above: Sen. Millard E. Tydings of Maryland.

Gov. George H. Earle of Pennsylvania was winning the Democratic senatorial nomination when this picture was taken at the primary election. On November 8 he will vote again, sighing hopefully.

Sen. Ellison D. (Cotton Ed) Smith of South Carolina knows he'll win, but isn't very happy about it. Throughout America, election day finds news photographers waiting at the polls for personalities.

Platinum, Once Worthless, Now Joins Metallic Nobility

Heat and acid resistant, capable of withstanding intense heat, this ore now competes with gold on jewelry counters and commands high prices on the world's metal markets.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

WITHOUT quantity manufacture of heat and acid-resisting equipment such as platinum and its alloys afford the laboratory, the tremendous progress of chemistry in the last hundred years would not have been possible.

Platinum utensils, able to withstand white heat necessary for analysis, have helped geologists determine the composition of rocks, and chemists to make many alloys.

For absolute accuracy, the national bureau of standards in Washington, D. C., as well as similar institutions abroad, uses weights of 90 per cent platinum and 10 per cent iridium—their untarnishable nature insuring constancy. Again, in electric-furnace apparatus, and in measuring extremely high temperatures, platinum serves the scientist. With it operations may reach a temperature up to 3,000 degrees Fahrenheit.

A continuous circle here; but not one to cause economic pain!

Fantastic now the thought of that South Seas merchant who cursed his luck on receiving payment in platinum "debased" bars that he could "neither dispose of, nor find any means of refining." Incredible, too, that a metal prominent now in jewelry cases the world over should have been used in remote Siberia for hunting-bullets, just as gold bullets were used in old North Carolina.

Cents to Dollars

But platinum was not always in the luxury brackets. The crude metal sold for as little as 34 to 41 cents an ounce in the early 1800s, in contrast with that all-time high, after the World war, of more than $150 an ounce. It was then apparently because of its scarcity and high price, that a fickle public reached for platinum jewelry. Wedding bands, cuff links, pencils, knives, cigarette cases, settings for jewels—all turned pale to meet the demand.

Welding platinum to fashion a setting for star sapphires. It is hard to realize that this metal, which brought more than $150 an ounce shortly after the World war, sold for 34 cents an ounce in the early 1800's and was used for bullets in far-away Siberia.

Like silver and gold, platinum has had its rushes and speculative booms—and its depressions. Small finds, scattered over the globe, add their bit to ever-changing problems of adjustment between scarcity and surplus. A few years back, when platinum fields were discovered in northern Alberta, Canada, nearly every available man in the region made for the "diggings." A de luxe rush, writers called this short but enthusiastic stampede, because parlor cars and comfortable river steamers made the trip easy for sordid and greenhorn.

In South Africa, on the Johannesburg stock exchange in 1925, platinum madness took its place beside diamond frenzies and gold fevers. Everybody was buying or wanted to buy shares in the unexpected platinum rock deposits.

"Lode deposits in the Bushveld Complex alone," wrote one commentator, "probably contain in the aggregate more platinum than all the rest of the earth's crust."

Yet later this industry came practically to a standstill because of the low prices then prevailing for platinum. Some years ago the course of native life in a deserted plain at Yubdo, Ethiopia, took a new turn when an Italian explorer and prospector discovered there platinum-bearing sands. Fringing the edge of shallow ponds, whole villages of rough-thatched huts sprang up. Men and women stooped to wash the sands in crude wooden basins, a primitive method still used in many places.

By 1840, a total of 21 platinum mines had been opened. Here was enough to supply 90-odd per cent of the world's market, until the World war and the Russian revolution for a time halted activities. Accumulated stocks could not hold up. Once more platinum users worried, but needlessly.

New Diggings

Two important new sources came suddenly to light, a wealth of platinum metals mixed with copper-nickel ores of Canada, and in large rock deposits of South Africa. Or, as one British platinum house naively put it, these opportune finds came "with the good luck which so consistently favors this country."

Individually, however, prospectors make few lucky hauls. Big platinum nuggets, such as excite gold hunters, are rare. The 21-pound nugget discovered in Russia in 1843 is the largest the world has known; today it is worth about $12,800. But few others compare.

A shining heap of all platinum yet recovered, it is estimated, would weigh little more than 580 tons, or less than half the weight of the gold produced in 1936. Canada, Russia, Colombia, and the Union of South Africa furnish the bulk of our platinum needs and for a time controlled the industry through an international company.

Other countries, including Spain, Panama, Brazil, Australia, and Japan, as well as Alaska and some of our own states, also yield the metal.

From many placers only a few grains of crude platinum are recovered from each cubic yard of material treated. To supply a metal-hungry world, however, even such tiny amounts are worth the effort. Worth too, hardship in primitive country and struggle against hostile nature.

Dredgers and Divers

Riding small steamers up the San Juan, passengers meet strange contrasts. First a dredge, insatiably scooping up mammoth mouthfuls of sand, gravel, and water, to pass through screens and over riffle boards. Then, just around the next bend, brown diving girls tie heavy stones to their bodies before sinking to river bottom in search of platinum-bearing sands. Some dive without stones, working fast at depths from 6 to 12 feet. Emerging with

C. Houston Goudiss Describes Food Value and Versatility of Gelatin; Outlines Its Many Uses in the Diet

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

WHEN we try to appraise the nutritional values of any one food in comparison with others, as a rule we have a difficult task. Most foodstuffs are composed of so many different substances that what is lacking in one will be supplied by another, and making comparisons may therefore be misleading as well as futile. But there is one food which is outstanding, not only because it is far less complex than most others, but because it is no exaggeration to say that without it, some of us might not be alive, and those of us who are alive would obtain far less enjoyment from our daily existence.

That food is gelatin!

What Is Gelatin?

Gelatin is a protein food which has no equal as a carrier, binder and "extender" of a wide variety of other nutritive materials. Chemically, it is classed as a colloid, which means that in solution, it can be removed from its solvent by filtration. It is because of this that it is so useful in producing smooth, delicious ice creams and other dainties, free from ice crystals.

Gelatin is an almost pure protein—a kind of protein known as an albuminoid. It is not a complete protein, because it is deficient in three of the amino acids that are necessary both to support growth and repair body tissues. In this it differs from meat, cheese, fish, eggs and milk, which are known as complete proteins.

It cannot be used as the sole source of protein in the diet, because those three missing amino acids are necessary for the formation of new body tissue. But it is especially rich in lysine, one of the protein building stones that is particularly important in the diet of children. Experiments indicate that no other amino acid can take the place of lysine and that it must be furnished by the food if adequate nutrition is to be maintained.

That coupled with the fact that it is non-irritating and easily digestible accounts for the large part it plays in the diet of infants and young children.

How It Is Made

Contrary to old wives' tales, gelatin is not made from hoofs and horns. In fact, there is no gelatin in hoofs or horns. It is extracted from connective tissue in the skins and from the bones of food animals.

Every homemaker who has made soup by simmering a knuckle bone for hours, and has found the soup "jellied" after standing overnight in the refrigerator, has prepared gelatin on a small scale. The same principles are followed by the gelatin manufacturer, only he operates in a much larger food kitchen, and each step of the preparation is scientifically controlled so as to

Pillow and Chair Set Of Crocheted Lace

Pattern 6168

Spend spare moments profitably with your crochet hook and some string and add charm to your home with crocheted accessories that match! Interesting to make and inexpensive, too, you could make either chair set or pillow alone or make a pillow with matching scarf ends. Can't you see what attention they'd attract at a bazaar? Pattern 6168 contains charts and instructions for making the set; illustrations of it and stitches used; materials needed.

To obtain this pattern, send 15 cents in stamps or coins (coins preferred) to The Sewing Circle, Household Arts Dept., 259 W. 14th St., New York, N. Y.

Every mother knows this from her own experience—and I rather suspect that many mothers describe these attractive molded desserts as the prize to be won in return for cleaning the plate of the main course!

In the Reducing Diet

Both men and women who are counting their calories, in an effort to avoid overweight, or to reduce, can profit by taking gelatin salads and desserts, which satisfy hunger without providing unwanted fuel value.

In cases of digestive disturbance, gelatin is frequently recommended because of its bland taste, and because it leaves no residue in the lower intestinal tract.

This same splendid food is also advised by doctors when a high protein diet is desired to speed growth, or during convalescence from an illness. Gelatin may be added to broths, milk, fruit and vegetables, and these, in turn, may be incorporated in solidified gelatin.

Indeed, this many-sided foodstuff has come to play such a wide and varied role in nutrition, not only by itself but by enhancing the value of other foods, that it must be numbered among the products that help to increase national health and vigor.

That Everyone Who Takes Aspirin Should Study

Drop a Bayer Tablet in water—it starts to disintegrate in 2 seconds—hence is ready to "go to work" rapidly

This Quick Dissolving Property of Genuine Bayer Aspirin Explains Fast Relief

If you suffer with headaches or the pains of rheumatism or neuritis, keep the above picture about genuine Bayer Aspirin in your mind. Especially if quick relief is what you want.

For the way a Bayer Tablet works in the glass is the way it works when you take it. It starts to dissolve almost at once—hence is ready to "take hold" of the rheumatic pain or headache with astonishing speed. Relief often comes in a few minutes.

Always ask for "Bayer Aspirin"—never ask for "aspirin" alone.
